No. 1389.

Sic Fortuna Domus

VIRG.

HE Pyddick is very much obliged to the Author of Common Sense, for his ingenious Plan for rebuilding the House of Commons. The Mischief which was apprehended was certainly very much less'n'd by the timely Absenting of several of his Friends; and as the over-crowding it may expose them a Second Time to the same Danger, it is to be hop'd, the same Love for their Country will prevent their running such Risques.

Notwithstanding it is insinuated that no Preparations are making for beginning the Work; I am credibly inform'd a great Quantity of Timber has been already sent'd for that Purpose: And several Architects are of Opinion, that great Part of the old Materials will serve again.

I do not believe this Scheme has been so much obstructed by any one Man, as by the great Number of Undertakers, whose Proposals have been rejected, as absurd or unreasonable. One of them, famous for his Frugality of the Publick Money, when Two Estimates were offer'd for building the same Plan, voted for the more expensive one, only because the Architect's Name began with a B.

I have often observ'd with great Concern, One Corner of the House to be extremely rotten, and have wonder'd, how it has been safe for any one to sit there, for near these Thirty Years. I agree with Common Sense, That the Numbers who, upon particular Occasions, throng'd the Court of Requests, very much endanger'd the Frame of the House; and had not a Sympathetic Power likewise lessen'd their Care, for Publick Affairs, I fear the very Foundations of the House would have been destroy'd.

As to the Model, I greatly prefer the Gothic Farm to the French or Italian. Some Years ago a Gentleman propos'd an entire French Plan, but the Master-Builder dying unluckily, the Scheme was laid aside: He has since follow'd the Study of Architecture in France; and I am inform'd that he has sent over a new French Plan, to a Friend of his, who is One of the chief Undertakers for the new House: As I always thought their Taste of Architecture detestable, I hope it will be rejected. Our Modern Imitators of the Roman Buildings, are more attentive to the Turns of Foliage, and other Beauties of Ornament, than to the Materials, or laying a good Foundation, and I should therefore oppose any Thing from those Hands, as unsafe. Tho' I approve of the Gothic in the main, yet as I have by great Observation discover'd, that there are likewise in the Gothic different Orders, I object to the West Saxon Order, which has something of a Popish Aspect, and is indeed too rude, for a Building that ought to be perfectly regular.

I own, I am not so well acquainted with the Antients, but agree in wishing that there was a modern Temple of Virtue.

It would not be improper, in one Particular, to imitate the famous Pantheon at Rome, which receives its Light from the Top. This would not only obviate all the Objections made by our intended Master of the Works; but several others which occur to me. Side-Lights are very inconvenient, being apt to show Things in false Colours: There would be no View across the Water, nor would the Situation of Towns draw off the Attention of the Members from the Subject in Debate.

The Scheme for Stalls savours so much of the old Church Leaven, that I absolutely reject it. Inscribing the Titles of the Places, of those Gentlemen only who are at present in the Service of the Government, would be too partial an Honour; unless the Abilities, or Readiness, of other Gentlemen was likewise signified, by inscribing the Titles of the Places they have been resold, enjoyed, or expect to enjoy.

I agree in objecting to the Back-Door thro' the Exequer and Whispering-Gallery, there being a Communication between them, and have both been employed with no great Regard to the Service or Decency of the House.

I can by no Means lay aside the Veneration I have for the Old Chair, which I think is already placed so agreeably to the Rules laid down, that I should wish for no Alteration. A different Position might be the Occasion of the Speaker being less heard, from his Voice sounding too hoarse, or too low. I take the present Chair to be made of true English Oak, and should a new one be ordered, possibly an unskillful Workman might make it of a certain Sort of Royal Oak, which Experience has shewn us not to be durable.

A Rat is known to be a very pernicious Animal to Buildings, undermining the very best Foundations. It is true, they ran away from a certain Place last Winter, thinking they had done their Business; however finding their Mistake they are return'd again, and several of them have been heard nibbling, in Hopes to compleat their Work. But whether it is to be undermined by Rats, or pull'd down by the Violence of some young Parliamentary Sampsons, I will venture to pronounce,

*Justum, & inacem propositi Virum,
Si frater illabatur Orbis,
Impavidum ferient Ruina.*

Yesterday arrived a Mail from Holland.

Constantinople, October 28. N.S.

NOW that the Grand Signior has concluded the Peace with the Emperor and the Czarina, he seems resolv'd to turn his Arms against Thomas Kouli Kan, if he refuses to give up his ancient Pretensions. The Porte takes great Umbrage at his Expedition against the Dominions of the Great Mogul, and indeed the Nobility of that Country have made some Instances to the Porte to relieve them by making some powerful Diversion that may oblige Kouli Kan to recall his Forces. The Porte has receiv'd a particular Account of all the Disorders committed by the Persians in the Mogul's Dominions, where the Soldiers have been guilty of the most enormous Outrages, without being restrain'd: For, not content with the rich Booty they have got by Plunder, they have burn'd most of the Towns through which they pass'd, and have massacred a prodigious Number of the Inhabitants of both Sexes from the Cradle to the Crutch. The Resolutions which the Grand Signior seems to have form'd with regard to Kouli Kan are, to let him know that he is resolv'd to attack him with all his Forces, if he does not accept of the following Terms, viz. 1. To renounce his Claim to all the Conquests which the Turks have made in Persia ever since 1726. 2. To recede likewise from the Advantages which he demanded for the Trade of his Persian Subjects in Turkey. 3. To withdraw his Troops from the Dominions of the Great Mogul, and to restore Caboulistan to him, to indemnify that Prince for the Disorders which his Troops have committed in that Prince's Dominions. 4. To renounce his Alliance with the Czarina, as far as it may concern the Interests of the Porte. 5. And lastly, to desist from the Innovations he proposed to introduce with regard to the Opinions that divide the Sects of Omar and Ali. People here wish heartily, that a Report may be confirm'd which says, that the Emperor of China intends to espouse the Great Mogul's Quarrel, and to declare War against Kouli Kan; which, if true, we might be sure that the Usbecks and the Chorafan Tartars will make a powerful Diversion. The Grand Signior has sent the chief Interpreter of the Porte to make his Compliments to the French Ambassador on account of the Mediation he has executed on the Part of the most Christian King.

Petersburg, Nov. 20. N. S. Our Garrison, which us'd to consist but of 3 or 4000 Men is augmented to the Number of 9000. The Velt Marshals Munich, Lascy, and the Prince of Hesse Homburg, are impatiently expected in order to be consulted as to several Measures to be taken with regard to the Affairs of Sweden. Orders are given, that 5000 Men of the Troops that serv'd against the Turks and Tartars be sent back into the Heart of the Empire. The Governor of Wybourg has been enjoin'd to send some suspicious Persons out of that Place. M. Cagnoni, who negotiated and sign'd the Treaty of Peace with the Porte is expected here in three Weeks at farthest, and the Court intends him a considerable Reward for his able and steady Conduct in that Negotiation.

Warsaw, Nov. 26. Before Count Munch left Chec-sim he gave Orders that the Mines which he had directed to be made there for blowing up the Works should be effectually stopp'd up, that the Place may be restor'd to the Turks in the same Condition as it was when the Russians took it. The said Place will be entirely evacuated next Month, and the City of Jassy is again garnish'd by the Turks, who have plan-dier'd the Houses of several of the Greeks that had taken an Oath to the Czarina.

Rome, Nov. 21. N. S. The Pope still keeps his Bed, but is well enough to dispatch Business. When the Cardinal de Tencin inform'd him that the King of France had appointed him to take Care of his Affairs at this Court, his Holiness said, ' You could not mention a thing that gives me greater Joy. I wish'd always that you might be vested here with some Character from the Most Christian King, and I have order'd my Nuncio in France to let the Minister know how much I was pleas'd when I heard of your Appointment.' He has also been wish'd Joy upon it by the other Cardinal Ministers; and the Pretender has not been wanting in the Discovery of his Satisfaction for this honourable Trust reposed in his Creature and Friend. The Chevalier went to see the Pope on the 17th, and conferr'd with him on the present State of Affairs.

Vienna, Nov. 28. N. S. The Emperor has just created half a Score Knights of the Golden Fleece, viz. the Prince Royal of Poland and Prince Xavier his Brother, the Electoral Prince of Bavaria, the Prince Palatine of Sulzbach, the Prince of Saxe Hillenburg, Prince Wenceslaus of Lichenstein, the Prince D'Aversperg, the Count de Wurmbrand who is President of the Aulic Council of the Empire, the Count Philip de Kinsky Chancellor of Bohemia, and the Count d'Althan. The Turkish Basha who commands at Belgrade, having lately invited the Generals Schmettau and Schlembourg, as well as the principal Officers of the Imperial Garrison, to a sumptuous Entertainment, assur'd them that the Grand Signior's Ratification of the Treaty would soon arrive here, and that he heartily desired to cultivate a good Understanding with his Imperial Majesty. The Prisoners that were in Custody there on both Sides were set at Liberty as soon as the Entertainment was over.

Naples, Nov. 17. N. S. At an Entertainment which was given the other Day by the Count de Fuencara the Spanish Ambassador, his Excellency among others drank a Health to PHILIP I. King of Corsica, to the no small Joy of Don Lewis Giafferi and the other Corsicans here, who have since had a Meeting to make Rejoicings on that Occasion. A Private of Majorca having enter'd the Port of Baja on Pretence of being drove in by Stress of Weather, the King sent Orders for him to depart, and not to enter into any Port of this Kingdom, or those of Tuscany that depend on his Majesty.

Naples, Nov 17. N. S. On the 6th instant an Edict was published for establishing a Council of Commerce in this City: Eleven Persons are nominated Commissioners, and Sig. Finechietti has been sent with the necessary Instructions to the Levant, to settle Commerce between the Subjects of this Kingdom and those of the Porte. An Officer who is a Native of the Republick of Venice, having been sent from hence with a Commission to raise Recruit in that State, he has upon Discovery been imprison'd there; on Notice of which this Court has written very strongly to the Regents of that Republick, insisting on the immediate Release of the said Officer, and Satisfaction for the Affront offer'd to the King of Naples.

Leghorn, Nov. 20. On the 19th came to an Anchor here the rest of the Merchant-ships which were under the Convoy of his Britannick Majesty's Ship the Tiger. The Gertrude, a Dutch Merchant-ship, which some Days ago sailed from hence for Naples, was attack'd by a Catalan Privateer in the Channel of Piombino; the Master and Crew of the Dutch Ship were much beaten and abused, and compell'd by Force to furnish the Privateer with Powder, Cloth for Sails, and other Stores. On the 17th at Night we had a violent Storm in these Parts, by which 16 Vessels were cast away in this Port and on the Coast, among which are two British and one Dutch Ship.
